"I've been framed!" Sharon Lenox exclaimed as a friend held her weaving project before her eyes. Art students frequently lugged materials and half-finished masterpieces around campus, becoming experts at balancing books and artistic equipment.

Lezlie Hart was mesmerized by the book review presentation of The Unicorn. Skits in Honors English had a little of everything, from candles, soft lights and music to teddy bears, pajamas and pigtails.

The arrival of Senior test scores aroused various reactions. A medley of mixed emotions emerged on the face of Travis Cloud as she attempted to interpret her test score. Seniors realized their freshman college days were creeping closer and closer and closer.

"How to Avoid Senior Privileges in Six Easy Lessons" was a subject of study for Underclassmen wishing to dispute Senior superiority. A few succeeded in their homework, but the Seniors had keen eyes when it came to snaring offenders. Conviction was fast and punishment even faster, but those youngsters just kept on coming!

The last year of high school was not the downhill slide Seniors had always expected. Graduation was slow in arriving and college decisions haunted students until the last day of classes. From these pressures emerged an epidemic of Senior Slump, personified by Elaine Jones who passed the endless hours with idle conversation.

"You touch 'em and I'll kill you!" howled Dave Seibert as Steve "Clippers" Rogers moved in for the kill. But Octagon's President eagerly jumped at the chance to butcher an Interact pledge. It was all over in a flash but Dave didn't seem to enjoy his "free" trim.

Take one enthusiastic student body, combine with one great school, mix in a few problems, add one fantastic man who really cares and what have you got? W.P.H.S. Civinettes added the final spice with the presentation of one orange blazer to Mr. Robertson.
